Prior to using When I Work, each of the five store managers were scheduling and tracking employee time by hand, which was taking eight hours a week. There was no way to keep payroll accurate, hold employees accountable and paper time-off requests were causing too much chaos.

After implementing When I Work, labor costs have gone down 20% and managers and employees have become more accountable. Plus, managers are now spending less than an hour each week managing the schedule and tracking time, which has allowed them to focus on improving operations and growing their stores.
